Wage Earners and Children Delighted With Opportunity Given by Festival.

The Eight Days' Musical Festival be-Square Garden promises to be a great success. Certainly, among the pupils of the grammar and high schools, the wage earners and the vast army of music lovers in Greater New York who have not been able to attend the operas, this carnival of music has aroused more stasm than any enterprise launched in recent years.

Thousands of pupils have communi cated their wishes to attend the coners and many of the principals of the hools have personally visited Julius Hopp, the managing director of the venture, and expressed their indorsement of the plan of popularizing music with the
